A school dropout, who completed Class XII as a private candidate, Naleena is a second year Masters’ student of the Visual Communication department. She is also the first transgender to graduate from the college, she said.

In her manifesto, she promised students that she would take up their issues. “Students wanted a separate girls’ team for volleyball. I have decided that there will be separate teams for all sports played in the college. We also planned to offer self-defence courses for the students. I want to empower women,” said Naleena.

She had enrolled to contest in the 2017-18 elections, but it was not held. At that time, she was ridiculed by her fellow students. “I decided to contest the election, as it is a platform to voice people’s needs,” she said.

She was adjudged the best outgoing student last year when she graduated from the college.
